A Public Calamity.

[From Lexington Gazette.]

There is a striking lesson for the people of Kentucky in the demonstration in the Republican Convention in Louisville on Wednesday over a rumor that certain men charged with the crime of murder had been pardoned.

This murder was actually committed. There is no doubt whatever that William Goebel was shot down on the Capitol Square and that he died from the wound. That the bullet that killed him came from the office of a Republican Secretary of State is also a matter beyond dispute. Every unprejudiced person who has carefully followed these cases from beginning to end believes that the overwhelming majority of jurors who have heard and passed upon the evidence has been correct in the conclusion that the Republican official from whose office the fatal shot was fired was implicated in the conspiracy.

The Gazette would do no man an injustice. It would prefer to believe Caleb Powers innocent, but no action of a Republican Governor, no amount of applause in a Republican Convention can remove the facts in the case. A representative convention of Republicans, a convention described by one of the Republican organs as "the largest and most representative gathering of Republicans in the history of Kentucky," has shown that it does not condemn the blackest crime that stains Kentucky's record, but that it is prepared to hail those implicated in this crime as heroes and martyrs.

We have heard recently much about lawlessness in Kentucky. Everybody will admit that there is too little reverence in this State for the majesty of the law. We can not be surprised at the outbreak of mobs or the violence of individuals when it is possible for the representatives of a political party now in control of the State Government to present the spectacle exhibited in Louisville on Wednesday. Men and a great party who have never expressed any condemnation of the crime, who have never turned their hands for the vindication of the law, but on the contrary, have devoted all of their energies and all of their influence to a movement to help the criminals escape the just penalties of the law, now go mad with joy at the prospect of the liberation of their heroes.

The Gazette has no quarrel with any man who honestly believes these men are innocent and ought to be pardoned, but it is a matter of grave concern to the people of Kentucky that a mere rumor of a pardon should create such a scene in a political convention representative of a party organization in control of the State Government. It is final and conclusive evidence that the Republican party is responsible for the Goebel murder and for all of the efforts to prevent the punishment of the assassins.

When a great political party thus assumes responsibility for a crime and deliberately uses all of its power to shield the criminals, those who would maintain the law and inculcate in the citizenship of Kentucky a respect for the majesty of the law must realize that they are confronted with an almost hopeless task. It is not only a disgrace to the State, but a misfortune, the seriousness of which can not be over-estimated. That such a scene is possible in any gathering that has any claim to be considered representative of Kentucky, ought to be a matter of profound regret of every loyal law-abiding citizen.

A Democratic Appeal.

Every Democratic member of the House of Representatives has signed a petition to the Speaker requesting him to recognize some member to move to discharge the Committee on Ways and Means from the further consideration of, and to suspend the rules, and to pass the Stevens bill, or any other bill, having the effect to put wood pulp and print paper on the free list. John Sharp Williams, the Democratic leader of the House, goaded the Republican leaders to fury by beseeching thirty Republicans, at least, to come forward and add their signatures to the petition. He called on those who had introduced bills for free print paper to sign but not one came forward, not even those who had made speeches in favor of such a measure. Mr. Williams made his request for action facetiously, he knew no Republican would come forward to the mourners bench, and repudiate the hide-bound partisanship that hangs like a pall over the deliberations of this Congress. He told them that:

"While the lamp holds out to burn, The vilest sinner may return."

And added: "If you have lately been, or expect to be, in any manner bull-dozed or boss-ridden, why, think for a second; think what a short life we live here and how necessary it is that we should do things."

But Mr. Williams' prayer fell upon standpat ears, and not one Republican sinner of them all came forward to show that he really was for even this small measure of tariff reform, even to curb a trust that is plundering every newspaper publisher in the United States.

How can the voters expect that "after election" Republican Congressmen will be any more willing to undertake the greater task of tackling hundreds of trusts which are protected by the tariff when they refuse to take the tariff pap from this infant that is eating up the substance of newspaper proprietors. Every Republican Congressman is now on record as either opposed to tariff reform, or afraid to disobey the orders or the standpat leaders who are wedded to their alliance with those trust magnates who furnish the main part of the campaign funds that keep the Republican party in power. Turn the rascals out and elect Democrats if you desire reform.

A Little Analogy.

The Supreme Court, in the Minnesota rate case, lays down a proposition which if applied to President Roosevelt, might make him squirm. It says:

"If the act which the Attorney-General seeks to enforce be a violation of the Federal Constitution, the officer, in proceeding under such enactment, comes into conflict with the superior authority of that Constitution; and he is in that case stripped of his official or representative character, and is subjected in his person to the consequences of his individual conduct." Where would Mr. Roosevelt stand if this principle was applied to his conduct?

Pause and Reflect.

"If two-thirds of the girls who go on the stage would go to the kitchen instead," says the Birmingham Age-Herald, "there would be a whole lot more happiness in this world." Think it over, brother. How would you like to have your dinner cooked by the average chorus girl?

Do You Think For Yourself?

Or, do you open your mouth like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you?

There is an intelligent thinking woman, in need of relief from weakness, nervousness, pain and suffering, then it means much to you that there is one tried and true honest medicine on record, sold by druggists for the cure of woman's ills.

The makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for the cure of weak, nervous, run-down, over-worked, debilitated, pain-racked women, knowing this medicine to be made up of ingredients, every one of which has the strongest possible endorsement of the leading and standard authorities of the several schools of practice, are perfectly willing, and in fact, are only too glad to print, as they do, the formula, or list of ingredients, of which it is composed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper.

The formula of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will bear the most critical examination of medical experts, for it contains no alcohol, narcotics, harmful, or habit-forming drugs, and no agent enters into it that is not highly recommended by the most advanced and leading medical teachers and authorities of their several schools of practice. These authorities recommend the ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the cure of exactly the same ailments for which this world-famed medicine is advised.

No other medicine for woman's ills has any such professional endorsement as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has received, in the unqualified recommendation of each of the several ingredients by scores of leading medical men of all the schools of practice. Is such an endorsement not worthy of your consideration?

A booklet of ingredients, with numerous authoritative professional endorsements by the leading medical authorities of this country, will be mailed free to any one sending name and address with request for same. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
